

LEADERSHIP TO REPLACE HAG
FOILS CABINET

In today's installment from the second series of Lloyd George's memoirs, the former British Prime Minister asks whether it was his duty to have dismissed Robert Borden as the cause of the failure of the Pascheudelle offensive. He sketches in detail the personality and interests of Borden, and concludes that, while the British Commander-in-Chief would have made a poor Corps Commander, he lacked the imagination and brilliance necessary for leadership of Britain's vast forces in the field. Exclusive advance publication of this remarkable work begins in last Saturday's Bulletin. A final installment will appear tomorrow.

CHAPTER FOUR

What action ought I to have taken to ensure that the military mistakes which had exhausted the man-power and almost destroyed the morale of the Alliance should not be repeated in 1918? There were several courses open.

The most obvious was to dismiss our Chief Military Advisor who had failed us so badly, and the Commander-in-Chief who had proved himself as a strategist to be unequal to the gigantic task committed to his charge.

Let me deal first with the case of Sir Douglas Haig. It is easy now to say: "You ought to have sacked him!" There is no man today, military or civilian, who does not deplore the Flanders offensive of 1917—not merely as a good idea

OUT OUR WAY

By Williams

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

THE muskrat has turned some of America's swamp land into farm land of real value. By keeping the marshes stocked with food, farmers have been able to derive a steady revenue from muskrat pelts. In southern Louisiana there is one marsh area of a million acres devoted to this industry.

Jap Peer Says Peace More Important Than Land

COULDN'T FIND LEADER TO REPLACE HAIG

Intelligence of secondary quality. He had the courage and sublimity of his race, and also a large measure of their business capacity. In the Primrose War he would have been known as a general-and-a-half.

In this war he would have done well as commander of an army corps, or an army where the strategy was determined by a bigger man. He did well in the concluding stages of the 1918 campaign under Foch's supreme direction. But he did not possess the necessary breadth of vision or imagination to plan a great campaign against some of the ablest generals in the war. I never met any man in a high position who seemed to be so utterly devoid of imagination.

He had a gift of careful selection of detail and gave his attention to the minutest. That was an invaluable gift.

These things which were visible through ordinary professional glasses he could see more clearly than most soldiers, but when intuition and genius were necessary for vision he did not possess the requisite intellectual equipment. But which of the did not? Haig removed Haig's man who had no his mastery of the profession, which there were no other and greater gifts to make up for that deficiency.

When I was considering the problem I met General Smuts and Sir Maurice Bleaney around the front to report to the war cabinet on the condition of affairs generally, and I confidentially asked them to look around and see for themselves whether amongst the generals there was one man whom they considered might with advantage attain and fill the first place. The answer came back with a very disappointing report as to the result of their investigation.

FRANKS AUSTRALIAN

Since the war I have been led by men whose judgment I value the only soldier thrown up by the war on the British side who possessed the necessary qualities for the position was an Australian general.

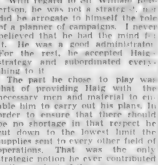

Competent professional soldiers whom I have consulted have all agreed that this man might, and might well, have risen to the height of the great occasion. But I knew nothing of this at the time. No report ever reached me, either as war secretary or prime minister, which attributed any special merit to this distinguished soldier. The fact that he was a civilian soldier when he was broke out may have something to do with the hardness in recognizing his exceptional abilities and weaknesses.

There were eminent generals in the British army who had shown conspicuous gifts in their spheres of leadership, but none of them was fitted to lead us across five times as large as Napoleon ever had under his command. In a military undertaking which would have failed even his genius to its ruin.

With regard to Sir William Robertson, he was not a strategist, and did not appreciate to himself the role of a planner of campaigns. I never believed that he had the mind for it. He was a good administrator. For the rest, he accepted Haig's strategy and underestimated everything for it.

The part he chose to play was that of preventing Haig with the necessary men and material in enabling him to carry out his plans. In order to ensure that there should be no shortage in that respect he cut down to the lowest limit the supplies sent to every other field of operations. That was the only strategic action he ever contributed to the conduct of the war.

PORTAL OPINION

Mr. Asquith once upon a time related in one of his rare fits of emotional ecstasy to have extolled Robertson as "the greatest living strategist." It was a ridiculous opinion, but as neither of them had strategic minds, the giver and the recipient of the compliment were equally well fitted for their part in the tragedy.

Sir William Robertson, in the book he wrote some years ago, was states that the reason why the operation continued for so long was due largely to the belief of GHQ that the strain imposed upon the troops was being so severely felt that it might soon result in a little too late.

He and his staff thought this view "appeared as a relic from the past." He seems to have expressed his doubts to the commander-in-chief, and Sir Douglas Haig on that occasion asked him to interview his army commander and ascertain for himself whether they did not agree with him. He then added: "That, of course, I could not well do."

He was then invited to meet these commanders at a conference where he was about to hold on the matter, and he prepared to carry my doubts to the extent of opposing him, and of thereby obstructing the application of that little extra pressure upon the enemy which experience has so often shown may convert an inconclusive battle into a decisive victory.

"It is difficult to deny that the campaign was protracted beyond the limits of justification," but a correct decision was not so easy to make at the time as it appears now.

"Although Sir William Robertson was practically in the position of a generalissimo, he had the authority of the government behind him, he felt that he could not ask the army commanders any question which implied that he had doubts as to the wisdom of proceeding with it, not one of them

Saves Many Lives When Uses Bombs

PRIVATE THOMAS WILLIAMS

Holmes, Canadian Mounted Rifles, Toronto, got the V.C. for most conspicuous bravery and gallantry when the right flank of our attack was held up by heavy machine-gun and rifle fire from a "pill-box" strong point. Heavy casualties were producing a very bad situation, when Private Holmes, on his own initiative and without orders, fired a series of three bombs, killing and wounding the crew of two machine-guns, and then rushed forward alone under heavy fire and threw the bombs into the entrance of the "pill-box," causing the thirteen occupants to surrender.

He then uttered a murmur that reached no one but himself, which was the standard of discipline amongst generals. There are no reasons why there but to send them to die if the commander-in-chief so orders.

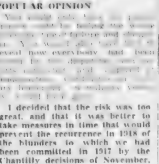

I am bound to record the fact that although Sir William Robertson tells the public in his book that he had misgivings about the reports emanating from GHQ, and that he thought "the campaign was protracted beyond the limits of justification," he never hinted to those who were dependent on his advice that any doubts had ever entered his mind on these points.

Had he intervened what would have been the effect on public opinion? It would have been "Here is that great soldier, Sir Douglas Haig, supporting his line of action by pointing to gallant men who have been killed in the line, and who are now being sent to the front."

and had almost been left in a corner. He was a very brave man, and he was a very brave man.

He was a very brave man, and he was a very brave man.

Your Comfort is Assured

....When You Travel With Us.

Not only is the railway the safest means of transportation in the world, but for land journeys it is easily the most comfortable. All railways recognize that their obligations to their passengers involve more than merely transporting them from one place to another — and much more is provided.

Canadian National Railways' equipment is modern and is designed to afford the maximum of comfort. Not only has much thought been given to obtain the best in material, but C.N.R. officials are alert at all times to see that the traveller is made to feel thoroughly at ease.

The ability to stretch one's legs and move about the feeling of roominess the well-appointed washrooms the cool ventilation in summer and the cosy warmth in winter the thoughtful but unobtrusive attention of employees who are anxious to please and know how these are the commonplace provisions of this great railway system.

Then there are the cool, cheerful dining and buffet cars, where the best of food, expertly prepared and served, is available at very low cost, and, at night, the spotless and airy berths, inviting and ensuring restful sleep. No other form of land transportation can begin to compare with it.

This comfort makes all the difference to a journey. Without it even a short trip becomes a trial to temper and body; with it, any journey, long or short, is an exhilarating and happy experience and one to be repeated as often as possible. An all-day journey in a C.N.R. car is almost like resting in a friendly armchair beside a window and watching an endless and ever-changing panorama of town and country pass by.

The C.N.R. specializes in comfort. You should therefore use it for all travel purposes. You will be completely pleased.

STASHASTAS TO FIGHT PLAYOFF WIN

Pompilus wins with stirring finish at Saratoga

... The Stasha pilot made no mistake when he reached into the bullpen and plucked out the youngster, of his staff—Lefty Plotts—for pitching duties.

The extremely youthful Plotts proved so good that he walked away with the major part of all the glory he was going to.

It all took him very gratifyingly, indeed, to the credit of "Pitts," as you may call him, came out of Bittles Canyon again this spring after being with the team for a short time.

Like the previous season, he did not get much work but was loaned for a couple of games to the junior Astros.

With them, he turned in a very fine performance and, a short time ago, was given a chance to go against the Cubs in the Canadian circuit.

He impressed the management so favorably that he might be loaned to the team for the play-off and the result speaks for itself.

While the Murdoch crew is in the lead now, Royals' lead has counted out at this early stage.

Manager King, who has been to tie it up Thursday and Saturday, will be within the bounds of possibility.

In the season's scoring averages, issued today, Clayton Delahay's mark of 372 comes very well ahead of the field.

The Royals' star was hitting consistently all summer, as an average has to be finished with one less than that.

Phil Horn, who has been doing well by himself, too, being runner-up for the second straight year with 345—nothing much was there.

In other fields, the golfing Bobby Proctor and Whit Matt, these performed very well.

The two local golfers, who have their first-round matches in the Canadian Amateur championship being held at Montreal.

Likewise, Mr. V. Johnson, of the "A's," defeated "New to the A's," ladies' tennis champion, started right in her defense of the title by taking her first match in the tourney at Winnipeg.

She should be hard to beat again this year.

There must have been tears in the eyes of baseball managers around Yankee Stadium yesterday when it was found necessary to turn away $2000 worth of money to use the important double-header between Yankees and Detroit Tigers.

However, they expected nearly as full a house, dispatches say, so they shouldn't mind the fact that there are three more games in the series.

FEW UPSETS AT AMATEUR GOLF MEET

Proctor, Matthews Both Win Opening Matches in Canadian Meet

By J. E. SANDERSON

LAVAL, QUE., Aug. 15.—Two former title-holders fell by the wayside in the first round of the Canadian amateur golf tournament.

Gordon Taylor and C. C. Haggarty, both of Montreal, were the pace too hot when the field was cut in half by the first round of 18-hole matches.

Upsets were few and far between when the big field swept over the rolling hills of the Laval course.

It was the first round of the fair-haired youth who took the title to the United States last year and who won his first match with "Odie" Cleghorn of Montreal who once turned up the ice as a rolling back hitting member of Montreal's team in the Quebec league.

Leading the Canadian defending force was C. R. "Standy" Somerville of London, Ont., who despite sharp criticism from the press, was the only player to favorably that he might be loaned to the team for the play-off and the result speaks for itself.

Clayton Dolohan Leads All Batters In Senior Circuit

Royals' Outfield Star has Great Average of .373 for Season; Phil Horn, of Cubs, in Second Place with Mark of .343

Clayton Dolohan, fleet, dapper leftfielder of Royals, topped all hitters in the Senior Baseball League by a wide margin during the 154 hit schedule just recently closed, having the fine average of .373.

According to official figures just compiled, Dolohan carried out a total of 25 singles and three doubles in 75 times at bat to amass his great mark.

The new champion had an average of .313 last season.

Phil Horn, speedy outfielder and right-center of the Cubs, finished runner-up for the batting championship the second year in succession with a mark of .343, gained with 23 hits in 67 appearances at the plate.

In 1933, Horn was second to Pete McCready with .323.

McCready, who took the batting honors last year, slipped down from a mark of .343 last year to .241 this summer.

Jim Reynolds, also of the Cubs, was in third place among the hitters with a mark of .334, while still another of the same team, Cliff Robinson, was fourth with .304.

Not one member of the Stasha got into the coveted 200-circle—that is, those who had played the necessary 12 games to be included with the leaders.

Larry Sillars, Stasha catcher, just missed it, however, with a mark of 199.

Bill Fisher, Stasha first-baseman, now in hospital, topped the whole league with a mark of .384 but appeared only in eight games. He also led in extra-base hits by pounding out six two-baggers.

One of the features of the year's figures was that Dolohan was hitting only six home runs being required. These were made by Larry Sillars, Fred Hess, Bill Fisher, Red Hopper, Ritchie and Duke Bar.

Following are the detailed averages:

PRINCE ALBERT BEATS VERDUN TO TIE SERIES

Revamped Prince Albert Eleven Beats Eastern Soccer Champs

WINNIPEG, Aug. 15.—A smooth-functioning rejuvenated eleven from Prince Albert last night came from behind in the provincial title-series with Verdun Park to defeat the eastern champions.

Verdun, who had won the Dominion Football Association championship to a third game, was the host team, Saturday.

Lightning-like rushes and a defence that moved to block each dangerous play before it gathered momentum gave the western champions the margin of victory.

Byrne inside left gave his nation's lead in the first half and Rodgers, centre, made a brilliant defensive five minutes before the final whistle.

True to the form that has characterized this team, the Stasha players forced the play from the start.

Over-zealous fans, however, seemed to pass up several opportunities in the first half but they steadied down just before the half.

There was an element of lust in the play that brought the North-West Stars to the field.

Byrne, who had been out for 20 yards out and the ball came off Payne's foot into the net.
